Germany

Our Erasmus project started when the French and Spanish students visited us in Germany for the first time. We were very excited to welcome them. Some of us even went to the airport as a welcome committee to receive them. Every morning, we picked them up from their hotel so we could go to school together. This helped us to spend more time together and get to know each other better.

The main goal of our Erasmus project is to create a stop-motion animated film. In Germany, we began working on the first ideas for our cartoon. At the beginning, we sat together and thought about different story ideas. We looked through many options and became more and more creative over time. Everyone shared their thoughts, and we discussed what would be the best and most interesting idea. In the end, we were able to agree on one final story.

Our idea is about a man who hears a knock on the door. He starts thinking about all the bad things that could happen. In his imagination, many scary and negative situations appear. However, in the end, it is only his neighbor asking him to join a party. This shows how people sometimes imagine the worst, even if the situation is harmless.

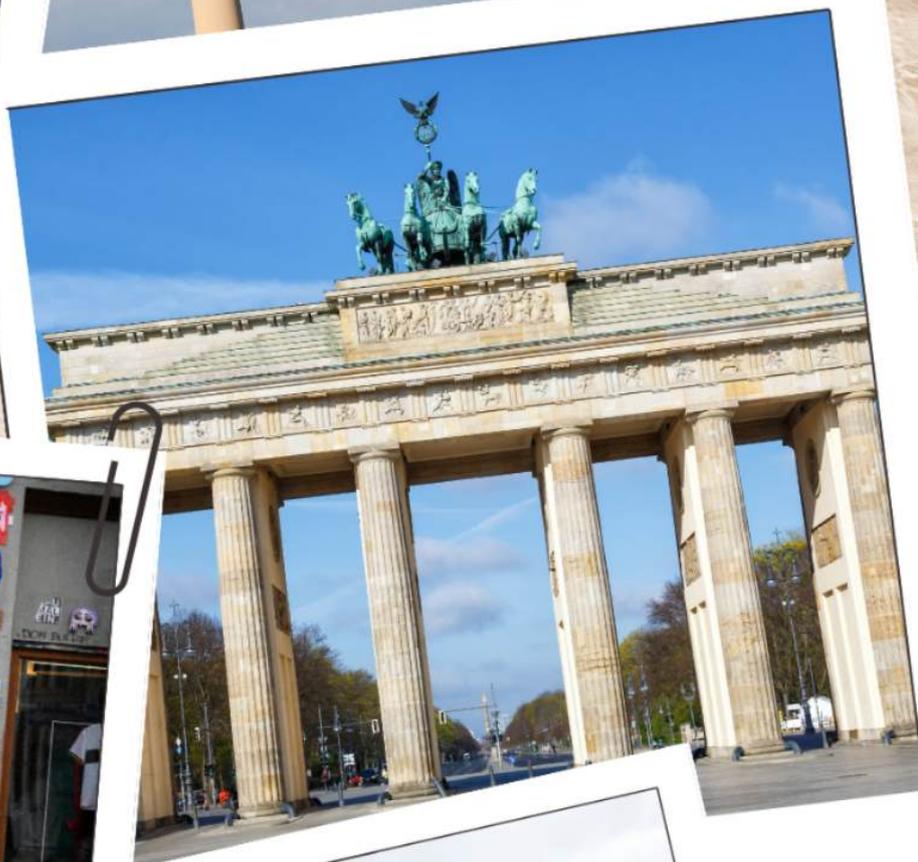

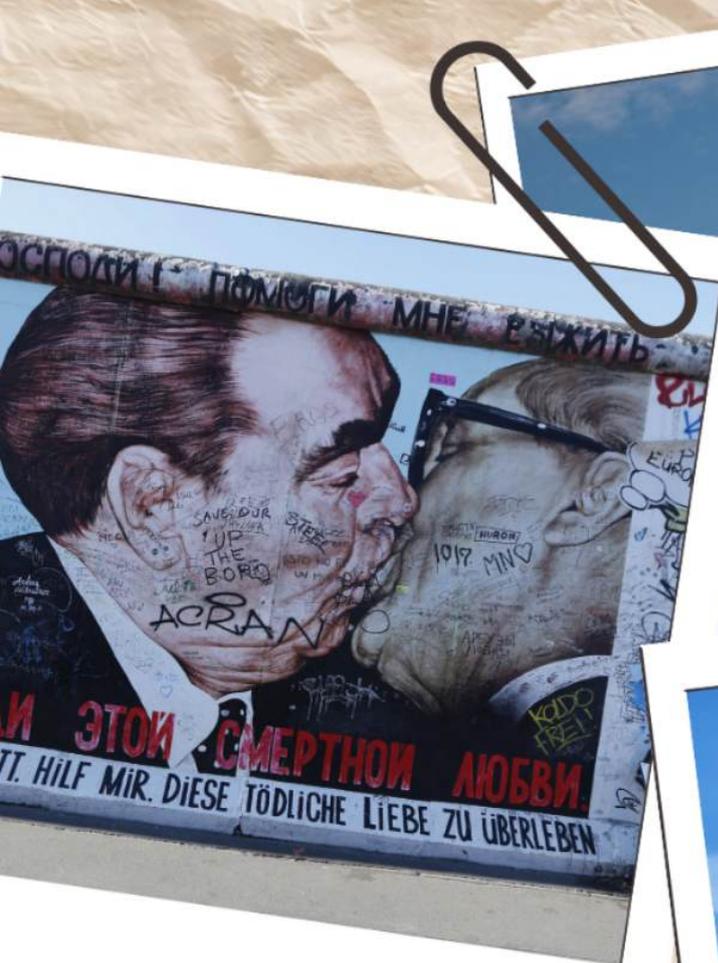

While the French and Spanish students were in Germany, we also worked on filming some scenes. For example, we filmed scenes for a nightmare that appears in the story. It was very interesting to see how stop-motion works and how much patience it takes. We learned a lot about planning, teamwork, and creativity.

Besides working on the project, we also did some getting-to-know-you games. These activities helped us feel more comfortable with each other. Very quickly, we became a good team.

We also showed our guests some famous places in Germany. Together, we visited Berlin and explored the city. We saw the TV Tower (Fernsehturm) and the Brandenburg Gate, which were very impressive. In addition, we went to Potsdam and discovered more about German history and culture. These trips were a great experience for everyone.

Another important part of the exchange was spending time together outside of school. We went out to eat together and enjoyed many meals as a group. These moments were very special because we could talk, laugh, and learn more about each other's cultures.

Overall, the first meeting in Germany was a great success. We not only made good progress on our stop-motion project, but we also made new international friends. It was an unforgettable experience, and we are looking forward to continuing our Erasmus journey together.

Berlin

France

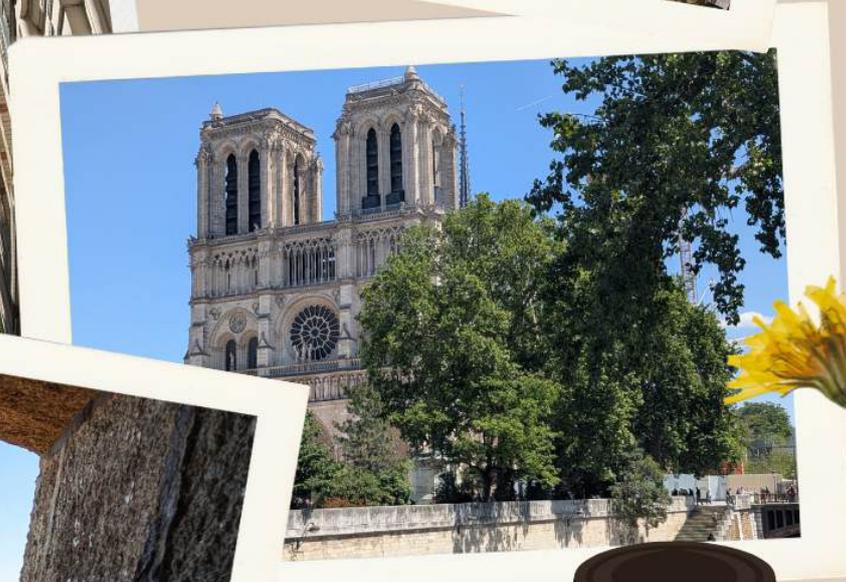

After our meeting in Germany, the next Erasmus trip took us to France. We flew from Berlin to Paris. When we arrived, we had a short sightseeing tour in the city. It was very exciting to see the French capital for the first time. After that, we continued our journey by train to Rennes. At the train station in Rennes, a French teacher and one student welcomed us. Then we took a bus to our hotel. During our stay in France, we worked a lot on our stop-motion project together with the Spanish students. In the mornings, we had breakfast at the hotel. Lunch was served at the French school, and in the evenings we all went out to eat together. These shared meals were a great opportunity to talk and laugh together.

Of course, we also went on some trips. We visited Saint-Malo and Mont Saint-Michel. Both places were very beautiful and impressive. On our way back home, we flew from Paris Orly Airport. Before our flight, we had some more time to explore Paris. We visited the Eiffel Tower and the famous cathedral Notre-Dame. It was amazing to see these landmarks in real life.

While we were in Rennes, we continued working on our animated film. First, we went shopping to buy materials for the characters. Then we carefully and patiently put the characters together. It took a lot of time and teamwork.

We also built the scenery for our film. We made houses out of cardboard and painted them. The French students built apartment buildings out of wood. After finishing the buildings, we started photographing the first scenes. We tried out different scenarios and experimented with the positions of the figures. We discussed many details, especially how the figures should be positioned in each scene. We also talked about possible improvements and discovered new ideas. Sometimes we changed small things to make the scenes look more realistic. The final changes were discussed together as a group. During this process, we found even more creative possibilities for our story.

Overall, our time in France was very productive and full of new experiences. We made great progress on our stop-motion film, improved our teamwork, and strengthened our international friendships. The trip was not only important for the project but also for us as a group.

Spain

Spain was another exciting stage of our Erasmus project. Our journey began with a flight from Berlin to Málaga. After arriving, we had some time to discover the city. We walked through the streets, enjoyed the atmosphere and visited the beach. The sunny weather and the relaxed lifestyle immediately felt different from Germany. A few hours later, we continued by bus to Granada. When we reached Granada, we had to change to a smaller bus to get to our accommodation. At first, everything felt a little chaotic, but this actually matched the lively character of the city. Despite the small confusion, Granada had a unique charm that made us feel welcome very quickly.

Every day started with breakfast at our accommodation, and we also had lunch there. This gave us a clear daily routine and enough energy for our activities and project work. At the Spanish school, we listened to presentations about the school system and daily student life. In the main hall, we watched videos from previous Erasmus projects, which gave us inspiration. We also played a Kahoot quiz about Erasmus. It was fun but also educational. Another creative activity was designing another person's name in an artistic way. This helped us connect in a playful and personal way. We continued working on our stop-motion film as well. We discussed ideas, improved scenes and focused on small details. Step by step, our project became more complete and professional.

Outside of school, we explored Granada together with the French and Spanish students. We walked through the city several times and visited beautiful viewpoints with an amazing view over Granada. One of the absolute highlights was the visit to the Alhambra. The buildings and gardens were breathtaking, and you could easily spend hours there. We also visited the Parque de las Ciencias, which was interactive and very interesting.

In the evenings, we spent time together in different ways. One night, we all went out for dinner as a big group. On other evenings, we met in smaller groups. These shared experiences helped us grow closer as an international team. Our return journey followed the same route: bus from Granada to Málaga and then a flight back to Berlin. Overall, our time in Spain added many new experiences to our Erasmus project. We continued developing our film, discovered Spanish culture and strengthened our friendships.

Italy

The final stage of our Erasmus project turned out differently than we had planned. Originally, we were supposed to work with a school in the Czech Republic, but they cancelled unexpectedly. Fortunately, one of our teachers managed to find a new partner school in Italy, more precisely in Bologna. We were very grateful that the project could continue. Our journey began with a flight to Frankfurt and from there to Bologna. After arriving, we took a train for three stops to the city center. From there, it was only a short walk to our hotel.

The train ride was quite adventurous and sometimes felt more like a roller coaster than public transport. It was definitely an experience we will not forget. When we arrived at the Italian school, we were first introduced to the school and its system. Just like in the other countries, there was a quiz to check if we had listened carefully. After that, we were given a short city tour. We saw some of the most famous sights, including the two well-known towers of Bologna. It was interesting to learn more about the history of the city.

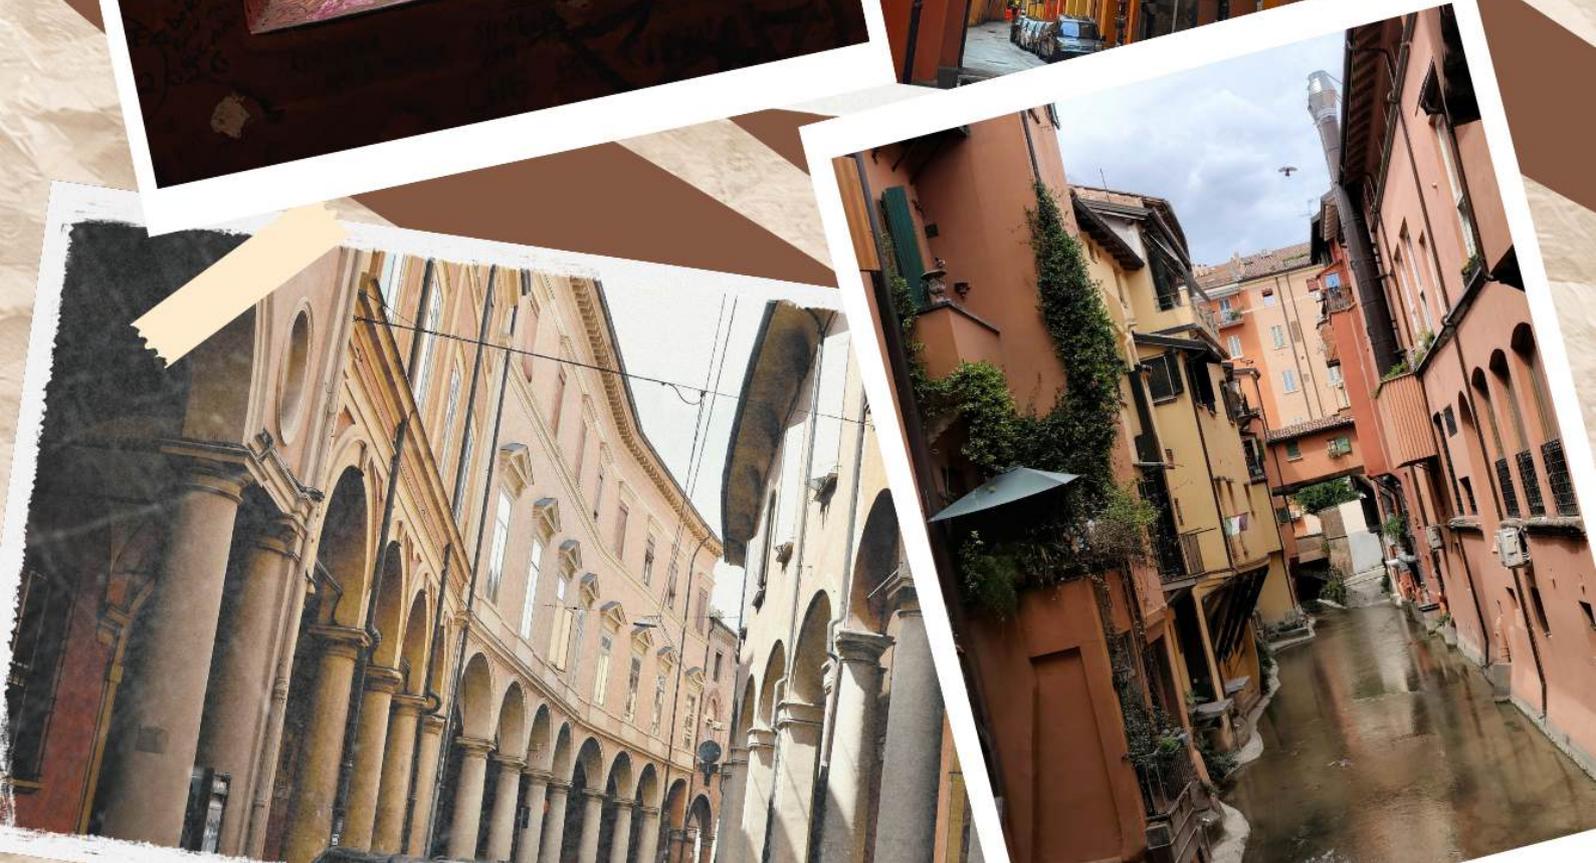

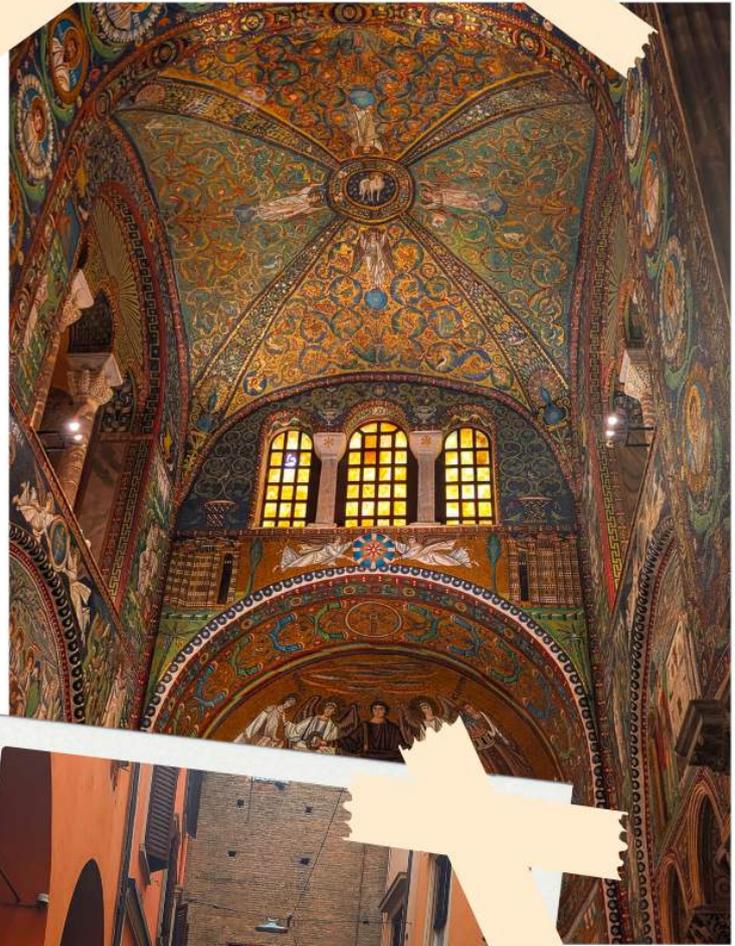

In the evenings, we often went out for dinner together. Breakfast was served at the hotel, and lunch was often enjoyed as a big international group with the French, Italian and Spanish students. These shared meals were always a great opportunity to talk and laugh together. During our time in Bologna, we worked on the Erasmus book. Each of us had to design one or two slides, mostly in small groups. Surprisingly, this part of the project was actually a lot of fun. We were creative, shared ideas and helped each other. After finishing our tasks, we had some free time to explore the city further. We visited the small water canals of Bologna and enjoyed walking through the streets. Of course, we also bought postcards and magnets as souvenirs to remember the trip.

Another highlight was our excursion to Ravenna, a small city about one and a half hours away from Bologna. We explored the city in detail and learned more about its culture and history. It was a very interesting and beautiful place.

At the end of our Erasmus project, we finally watched our finished stop-motion film together. We were all very proud of the result, and the film turned out great.

After that, we answered a few final questions about Europe and gave feedback about the whole project. Unfortunately, this meant that our Erasmus journey was coming to an end. For the return trip, we flew from Bologna to Vienna and then from Vienna back to Berlin. Looking back, the experience in Italy was a wonderful final part of our project. Even though the original plan had changed, everything worked out well. We not only completed our film and the Erasmus book, but we also created unforgettable memories with our international friends.

Erasmus

Looking back, the Erasmus project was a great success. From the first ideas in Germany to the final film presentation in Italy, we developed step by step as a team. We learned how to plan, communicate and solve problems together. Working on the stop-motion film and the Erasmus book taught us patience, creativity and responsibility. The experience showed us that even when plans change, like with the Czech Republic, new opportunities can arise. This project helped us grow not only academically but also personally.
